Duncan bounced along paths that led through rows and rows of corn. His father said, "Go." His mother said, "Careful." Mrs. Hatch said, "Welcome. Eat. Enjoy."
"Oh," said Duncan. "This is going to be a good day. I am on my way to Mrs. Hatch's Blueberry Patch. I am going alone because I am a puppy with a very brave heart. Also, I won't talk. I can just eat."

But Duncan was also a very smart dog. He understood that even if they failed to get the blueberry to his parents, he and his new friends had faced their task together with courage for it was a very big blueberry and they were not. They all had already done something amazing.The group stood at the crest of the hill, teetering and balancing themselves and the blueberry. They couldn't stay there and hold on much longer so they began the descent.
